REPRESENTATIVE CASES

- Represented insurer with numerous primary insurance policies in complex Portland Harbor Superfund environmental coverage case. This case involved lost policy issues, issues related to policy exhaustion, multiple tiers of insurance, numerous insurers, hundreds of thousands of documents in discovery and numerous depositions. Successfully defended insurer's position regarding defense costs and policy interpretation in briefing before the Court and in mediation.
- Represented insurer in insurance coverage matter brought by homeowner as subrogee of insured contractor alleging that insurer breached its duty to indemnify contractor. Won case on partial summary judgment and successfully negotiated a settlement amount that was favorable to the insurer for the remainder of the claims. Attorney's initial evaluation of the case was proven accurate that the damages were almost all uncovered because of the "Your Work" exclusion and the definition of "property damage."
- Represented landowner in environmental contamination matters before regulatory agency. Successfully worked with regulators, insurers, consultants, and counsel for other potentially liable parties to remediate the land and remove liability for client.

- Represented insurer in declaratory judgment and reformation lawsuit where two insurers and four separate policies were at issue. Utilized underwriting information and other evidence to demonstrate scrivener's error and obtain summary judgment ruling that insurers' policies contained a mutual mistake and should be reformed to remove terms purportedly covering millions of dollars of construction defect liability.
- Provided insurer coverage advice and representation in litigation after common law and statutory bad faith claims made against insurer. Protected client files and documents through numerous requests for production and negotiated settlement that was beneficial to insurer and protected against future claims.
- Represented plaintiff in intellectual property lawsuit regarding plaintiff's trade secrets. Through detailed discovery, numerous depositions and use of expert witnesses demonstrated that trade secrets had been stolen and obtained settlement without having to utilize summary judgment motions where the client's trade secrets could have been exposed further.
- Won summary judgment for insurer in case brought by assignee of insured general contractor on both the duty to defend and the duty to indemnify based on known loss provision in insurance policy.
- Successfully defended excavator against bodily injury claims by employee of general contractor who was injured in trench collapse by showing through expert discovery that excavator complied with applicable safety standards and thus could not be liable for negligence.
